

Dear Sir:

I would like to express my concern for the potential to limit certain programming associated with my XM service under NAB's petition 04-160.

The content and quality of commercial AM and FM radio has deteriorated to the extent that without XM service, I would no longer listen to the radio.

It is a basic principle of our economy that increased competition leads to better products and services for the consumer. To limit the variety and quality of programming that is not available elsewhere would be a disservice to XM subscribers, and a blow to our system of free enterprise.

If AM and FM stations really want to win back their listeners, let them provide a better alternative, and not solicit help from the government with more unnecessary regulations limiting competition.

Respectfully,

Mark Meyer
